

Gee Hock

Rushworth Chronicle

23 May, 1890

An old Whroo fossicker in the person of Gee Hock departed to "that bourne from whence no traveller e'er returneth" on the 19th inst.

In this world he seemed to have had his share of tribulation, and his gray hairs went down in sorrow to the grave, seeing that in a land of plenty, dirt and famine were his principal portion.

The old Celestial had reached three score years.

Information was brought to Senior-constable Bennett at Rushworth on Tuesday that he had been found dead in his hut, but as Dr. Heily had attended and relieved him recently, there was no cause for an inquiry.

The register of burials at Whroo includes a Gu Hock, buried in 1890.
